The Counter-Revolution in Germany

By LOUIS FRAINA,

International Secretary, Communist Party of America

Berlin, March 28.

The Ebert-Noske-Bauer Government shorn of Noske and Bauer, is again in power. The streets are still a mass of barbed-wire entanglements erected by the counter-revolutionary troops against the Government troops, armed with rifles, sheath-bayonets and hand-grenades, patrol the streets prepared to shoot down the workers (scores have already been shot)—the identical troops that did not fire a shot in defense of the Kapp-Lüttwitz-Kapp. The old apathy is again dominant in the streets of Berlin—that cold, hopeless apathy which immediately impresses the observer in Germany. In the "high life" districts, in Unter den Linden and Friedrichstrasse, the swirl of frightful gaiety again rushes on, while in the proletarian districts there is sullen resentment, tempered by partial anticipations of a new struggle.

Five days ago it appeared as if this new struggle might start immediately. The proletariat of Berlin was still on strike, in spite of the Ebert Government and the trades union bureaucracy having issued orders to end the strike. In city after city the workers used the opportunity of the crisis to usurp power, developing the General Strike beyond the limits imposed upon it as a strike in defense of the Government. In Westphalia and the Rhineland, in the Ruhr mining districts, the working class, while not yet wholly clear on means and purposes, was in complete control, seizing government power and organizing an active Red Army of 30,000 men, with 50,000 in reserve. But, for reasons which will develop later, these hopes against the Red Army, which has been compelled to accept an armistice: disaster and massacre will come in the Ruhr.

These are the inescapable facts of the situation: the Ebert Government is in power, but the military coup d'etat has partially conquered since it has compelled the Government to compromise and move more to the Right; the Government is withdrawing its concessions, or rather its promises of concessions to the masses; the interests behind the military coup are so conscious of the danger against the proletariat which rallied to the Government's defense; the Government is compelled to rely more than ever on military forces; while the Cabinet is being reconstructed according to the policy of the Right and not according to the demands of the Left. The proposal of the Independent Socialist Party for a "Socialist Government" (Cabinet coalition of Independents and Social Democrats) has been contemptuously rejected—a rejection accompanied by a new Terror; the Socialist-bourgeois Government is now choosing between the proletariat and the reaction, again chooses reaction.

The revolutionary crisis produced by the military coup, developing conditions for the final struggle for power, is being converted into a Cabinet-parliamentary crisis, with the Independent Socialist Party manipulating the situation to secure Cabinet concessions and parliamentary power; the Independents having, all through the crisis, acted not with an eye to the revolutionary seizure of power, but with an eye to (1) the reconstruction of the Cabinet on a "Socialist" basis, and (2) the coming election in which the Independents are the majority party, while the Communist Party of Germany (as represented by the Reichs-Zentrale) is assisting the conversion of the revolutionary crisis into a parliamentary crisis by not insisting up to the requirements of the situation and by rendering criminally opportunist encouragement to the Independents in their proposal for a "Socialist" Government.

And the masses? The masses are stirring uneasily, baffled and betrayed; and they may yet, under the pressure of events, initiate a new struggle, compelling the hesitant and the moderates to accept revolutionary action.

1.—THE COLLAPSE OF DEMOCRACY

The Ebert-Bauer-Noske Government was directly responsible for the military coup d'etat. The coup was made by troops recently returned from the Baltic provinces, where the Government allowed a concentration of the most reactionary troops of the old German army for use against the Revolution and against Soviet Russia. The coup had been discussed for months and open preparations made; but the Government did nothing. On March 11 General von Lüttwitz met President Ebert in Conference and issued an ultimatum, but von Lüttwitz was not placed under arrest, while Noske, actively or compliantly, allowed the reactionary troops to prepare their coup. Late in the evening of March 12 Noske issued a statement that the fears of the Left concerning a military coup were unfounded, and that, a few hours later 10,000 troops invaded Berlin to the strains of martial music and the plaudits of a crowd; the Government troops of the old regime, shot in defense of the city, while the Government itself fled in an automobile.

There was no power of resistance in the Government—no resistance in democracy and the parliamentary regime. Aggressive and relentless against the proletarian revolution, the Government was weaker than a woman's tears against the counter-revolution. Democracy and the Government had been compelled to rely upon the most reactionary forces, upon the military of the old regime. Democracy and the Government did not act uncompromisingly against the military, since antagonizing or weakening the military meant weakening the basis of their own power; hence the Government had simply allowed the preparations for a coup to proceed. The revolutionary Government would have answered the threat of von Lüttwitz to march upon Berlin by mobilizing the armed proletarian and by general arrests of reactionary forces by mass-Terror against the bourgeois-Junker reaction; but the Socialist-bourgeois Government had disarmed the proletariat, while aggressive measures against the reaction would have meant an open break with the Right, and the collapse of the Government under pressure of Right and Left. At a meeting of the National Assembly on March 14, Socialist Chancellor Bauer said: "After mature deliberation the Government decided not to enter into a bloody struggle with the Kapp, upstarts, and therefore determined to leave Berlin, thereby avoiding violence." (Against the Communists there never was any thought of "avoiding violence!" But that is miserable equivocation. The Government had at its disposal in Berlin alone 30,000 troops and 50,000 armed civilians, and about 300,000 in all Germany, yet the Government evaded a struggle with 10,000 counter-revolutionary troops. Why? Because the Government knew that its troops, reliable in crushing a Communist, were completely unreliable as a means of defense against a reactionary uprising. Moreover, an open military struggle would compel tained the ascendancy of democracy. The petty bourgeois democracy, accordingly, adopted a policy of "watchful waiting" and "neutrality," which under the circumstances assisted the counter-revolution—democracy did not defend itself against the Left, with whom there could be neither compromise nor merger. It might be unpleasant for the military reaction to conquer, but a satisfactory agreement could be arranged.

Thus, then, was the consequence of the Socialism of the Social-Democratic Party—that, in affirming democracy as the means to Socialism it developed means for the ascendancy of Junker-Capitalism, thereby directly promoting the coming of military counter-revolution.

And after 18 months of murdering the proletariat and Socialism, the Government and the Social-Democratic Party were compelled—to call in the army, the proletariat and Socialism to act against its own creation, the military counter-revolution.

2.—DEVELOPMENTS OF THE CRISIS

In choosing the alternative of a General Strike the Government and the Social-Democratic Party were fully aware of the fact that the strike might develop beyond the limits imposed upon it as a strike in defense of democracy and the Government. But the Government was equally aware that it might depend upon the military in the event of the General Strike assuming revolutionary proportions; and, moreover, the Government, simultaneously with the call for a General Strike—issued in the name of Ebert, Bauer, Noske, Müller and David (Noske afterwards denied subscribing to the call)—prepared measures to prevent the General Strike becoming revolutionary. In the Ruhr district, the trades union revolutionary and under a state of martial law, the strike was consciously limited, and it did not become a General Strike until March 17, when the struggle was no longer against the military coup but against the Socialist-bourgeois Government.

In accepting the alternative of a General Strike the Government, moreover, simply legalized an accomplished fact, since the masses acted independently of the Government.

On Thursday March 13 the General Strike was proclaimed in Berlin by the trades unions, the Social-Democratic Party and the Independent Socialist Party. All three proclamations agreed in essentials—strike against the coup, in defense of democracy; the Independents justified the revolutionary phrases in characteristic style, but proposed no definite revolutionary measures; while the trades unions spoke of the "legal" Government being menaced by the coup, of the danger of reaction being restored in state and shops, of the Republic being in danger. There was no clear call to revolutionary action, not even from the Communist Party which, on Saturday, declared against the General Strike on the assumption that the military coup and the Government were identical.

The response of the proletariat to the General Strike was immediate and complete; in Berlin, the struggle immediately and completely assumed the character of a proletarian struggle against the military-bourgeois reaction.

The situation in Berlin was most characteristic of the General situation in Germany. The collapse of the Government was complete; there was not a trace of its authority or its resistance. Herr Kapp occupied the Chancellery, while General von Lüttwitz installed himself in the Ministry of War from whence Comrade Noske had issued orders of death against the Communist proletarian revolution. Government district, now a fortress of barbed wire entanglements, machine guns and artillery, opens on the Tier-Garten where, fifteen months ago, Karl Liebknecht urged the proletariat to Revolution while three streets beyond is the turgid canal into which the assassins of the Socialist Government cast the mutilated body of Rosa Luxemburg. The National Army either retired to its barracks or fraternized with the counter-revolutionary troops. The Noske Guards, insolently active in all the streets of Berlin the day before, now scurried to cover, and did not appear again until the struggle against the revolutionary masses started. The Einwohnerwehr (literally, Guards of the Inhabitants, civilian White Guards) issued a declaration of neutrality (neutrality under the circumstances meaning assistance to the counter-revolution) while emphasizing its readiness to march against "plunderers," that is to say, against the proletariat; and it did march to action when the General Strike began to threaten "law and order" and the struggle developed against the Government.

As against these open and masked forces of counter-revolution, the proletariat put on the General Strike was alone. It was clearly, emphatically the working class against all. The paralysis of the most public activity, was complete; it was as if a giant mass of ice pressed down upon the city. The Kapp-Lüttwitz Government was isolated; its troops occupied the streets, but the proletarian closed his factories, halted railway and street car traffic, and kept the city unlighted at night. The Kapp-Lüttwitz dictatorship issued innumerable proclamations about "right" constitution, bread and liberty—but the iron answer of the proletariat mocked it all: the Kapp-Lüttwitz dictatorship styled itself the "Government of labor,"—but there was no labor; the Kapp-Lüttwitz dictatorship issued threats against the profiteers, but this did not worry the profiteers, the dictatorship issued a decree providing death for strikers and strike directors,—but the General Strike implacably persisted. All authority, "legal" and "illegal," was now a myth of the General Strike.

The struggle of the proletariat in Berlin was, objectively, a revolutionary struggle. But, un-the Government to arm the proletariat, thereby developing the forces of proletarian revolution, compromise; never for a moment did the Socialist Government of Ebert, Noske and Bauer forget the menace of a proletarian revolution: concessions to the Right rather than permit the revolutionary proletariat to conquer!

Democracy and the parliamentary regime, acclaimed as the final symbols of the Revolution crept? It was, in the persons of the Government, fleeing to Dresden in an automobile, and their issuing proclamations about law and order, right was power against power and might against might. The National Assembly, upon its steps, dispersed as chaff before the wind by the bayonets of the Lüttwitz troops: the Reichstag, where the Assembly met, now as imposingly empty and three soldiers, while children played upon its steps, an appropriate memorial to Karl Kautsky. The representatives of petty bourgeois democracy furnished their own arms against the military coup, but the democracy itself was apathetic. Even own for action against the counter-revolution. Moreover, for this democracy, the counter-revolution, against the counter-revolutionary troops meant pre-empting struggle within the military forces of the nation, to disrupt the power which main-

"S O S"

Comrades! There are tens of thousands of "people" in America who are appealed to as "Comrades" by the betrayers of Socialism—the vile officialdom of the S. P. These cowardly counter-revolutionists need but to cry aloud for help, when they are in need, and the response is made in a ready chorus. Having forsaken the struggle, they are permitted by the forces of Law and order (who are not slow to recognize their aides!) to carry on in the open. Remaining a "legal" party, they meet in halls and in the streets; they print their "legal" papers, give their "benefits" with great popular success, correspond with their "comrades" without fear of post-office interference, and in every way are free to appeal for aid without governmental restrictions. They are safe, and it is possible for them to be so only because they have turned their backs upon every revolutionary principle and forsaken the class-struggle. The "stinking carcass" of the S. P. that we forsook for the living body of Communism can call for help when it is in need, and get it—get it promptly—in the thousands, yes, in the tens of thousands, of dollars.

The Communist Party, Comrades, has no such opportunity. Every channel is practically closed to us. The ordinary ways are shut, with a sign up: "NO THOROUGHFARE." Underground machinery, in the early stages of organization (facing, let us not forget, the rapidly ripening period of world conflict), is a slow and clumsy mechanism for meeting a financial crisis. Aside from our underground Party paper, the means for making an impressionist appeal to the membership are unimaginably meager. The task becomes incredibly difficult to bring home to the heart and mind of every member the realization of a crisis. We can only send an S O S over the wireless of our common revolutionary class-consciousness.

The time has come, Comrades, for such an appeal to be sent out broadcast for such "wireless" stations to pick up. Your Party wants you to pick up much that is not ordinarily heard—that cannot be set down. Your Communist understanding will help you to grasp the situation and the need. Respond as generously and as promptly as the need is great and immediate.

This must of necessity be no long-winded appeal. If we could hold mass meetings, you would be fired by the eloquence of your speakers. You would dig down into your jeans and throw your silver and your greenbacks into the contribution basket. There would be enough of you in the audience at one meeting to raise the money for the week's issue of the paper—or pay an old printer's bill so that the printer will continue printing our paper on faith (how few there are to print ours under present conditions you hardly realize) or meet the cost of technical work essential to the conduct of your Party.

But there are no meetings now. Our mail is watched, our activities, even the most innocent or most guarded, noted with suspicion of its character. Our press necessarily concentrated can carry no long detailed explanations of situations, and daily appeals for funds. We must leave much to your understanding, Comrades. All we can say is: GIVE AND GIVE QUICKLY! AND GIVE TO THE LIMIT OF YOUR POWER! The need is great—greater than we can tell. We suggest that you do a few "Saturday-ing" for the Party. Follow the example of the Communists of Russia who are "Saturday-ing" for the up-building of the Soviet work in Russia, by doing likewise for the up-building of the Communist work in America. For the month of July give your Saturday morning's wage, and send it promptly through the regular Party channels, that the work of your Party may be pressed to, unhampered.

You know in what financial crisis the criminal action of our former National Secretary left the C. P. Your Executive Committee is making herculean efforts to produce bricks without straw. How long we shall be able to continue to perform this miracle we don't know. If we could go to you in packed meetings, we would sound the note of warning in plain terms. This being impossible, your C. E. C. sends out an S O S. Comrades, we urge you, don't delay. There is danger in delay. Prompt and generous action alone will avert it. ACT AT ONCE!

IN THE THIRD INTERNATIONAL

The Vienna correspondent of the "Daily Herald" writes: At the conference of the Third International, held in Moscow on May 2nd, Bukharin, Radex and Zinoviev were named as the Committee to decide the question of admittance to the Communist International.

The Panic Is Coming

With the defeat last winter of the great Longshoremen's coal and steel strike, a lull, like the calm before a storm, has come in the class struggle in this country. True, certain industries have struck intermittently—particularly in the garment and textile trades—and the "softlaw" rail strike continues in more or less intensity to cripple the rail carriers—but in general the situation is superficially less tense than it was last winter. The capitalist class breathes easier as far as the domestic situation is concerned, and is beginning to hope for a peaceful readjustment of the labor problems and a relatively peaceful reconstruction period in the future. Its main concern right now is with the international situation, which they fear may drag them into the whirlpool of new wars for which they are not prepared.

In this hope the capitalist class are doomed to deep disappointment and that before the year is over.

The black clouds of class war hang ominously over the horizon, awaiting only a psychologically favorable moment to break with the intensity of a deluge. The three great strikes of last year are bound to break out again, despite all the "Wilson Commissions" and the treachery of the labor leaders. The cost of living, which is putting so hard upon all classes of labor, is increasing, according to the United States Labor statistics almost at the rate of three percent a month. Factories are working part time or shutting down altogether. This is true of nearly all industries, aggravating the already intolerable conditions of the vast majority of the working class.

The export trade is decreasing every month, because of the inability of the foreign nations to pay cash, or because their credit is exhausted.

The banks are cutting in their loans to manufacturers, and are holding on tight to their money, or investing it in U. S. guaranteed foreign securities at an exorbitant rate of interest. So much so, that the dumping of the Liberty Bonds on the stock market because of their relatively small interest rates has reached the stage of a national scandal in the capitalist world.

The wholesale price-cutting of large stores is another evidence of the instability and precariousness of industrial and commercial conditions. A financial panic, followed by an industrial and stock market panic is due in this country and will break ere long.

In addition to the above—a new wave of strikes is impending which may hasten the industrial chaos and put an end to the capitalist delusions of a "peaceful reconstruction period."

The anthracite coal miners, who have been negotiating these weary months without coming to a satisfactory arrangement, are clamping at the bit. How much longer the leaders can hold them in check remains to be seen. Likewise, the railroad brotherhoods, whose leaders have performed yeoman service for the capitalist class in checking and "outlawing" the strikes of the most dissatisfied and undisciplined workers, are beginning to gather their forces for a tussle with the owners. There is a strong likelihood that the steel, coal and railworkers may come to some working agreement in the near future, to the great measure to bear upon the government to force wage-increases from the owners. This will naturally fail, as the capitalists will absolutely turn down any demand for more than ten or fifteen percent increase.

A financial and industrial panic, complicated by a series of the most gigantic strikes in the history of strikes in this country—plus the new post-war psychology of the workers, increased class consciousness and possibilities of tremendous significance from the Communist viewpoint. By this we do not mean that the revolution is here, or even far from it. This situation will however hasten the capitalist disorganization of industry, demoralize the social and economic structure to an extent that will make recovery impossible, and even hasten the necessary objective conditions for a "revolutionary situation." That is all.

For the time being, as far as the working class is concerned, it will get a taste of the weight of the capitalist state upon their heads. Court injunctions, impounding of union funds, martial law backed by the armed forces of the state, on a scale that will compel them to open their eyes and force them to adopt new methods of struggle—a new objective—a political objective—the overthrow of the capitalist state and the conquest of the state power and the establishment of the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

That is all we can hope for from the working class in the coming era of panics and strikes: 1) a growing class-consciousness which will lead to the ousting of their old leaders in the industrial world, and the adoption of more aggressive methods of waging the battle against the ruling class. 2) A new orientation towards the problems of the state as taught by the bitter experience of their own struggle.

That is all, but it is a great deal from our point of view. It will make possible for the time being the general spread of Communist propaganda among the masses who until now have been stoically unresponsive. It will lead to the development of Communist agitation in the shops and industries, a new type of leader in the trade and industrial unions who, though they may not come into power will have a strong, influential, class-conscious minority behind them. It will lead to the making of the Communist movement a real mass-movement in that it will be possible for us to have—not a large membership, but the possibility of getting the ear of the worker and industries who will have the tacit or open sympathy of the workers in the shops, something out of the question in the present.

With these new avenues open to the Communist party, and with the class struggle gaining impetus in the direction of an open conflict with the capitalist state (due to the development of powerful antagonistic social and economic forces of inherent capitalist society and not to any conditioned unconsciously forward by these forces) ing on our work, to another stage of the class struggle, another milestone passed on the class struggle, another milestone passed on the road of the proletarian revolution—to the overthrow of the capitalist state and the establishment in this country of the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

A New Attack Upon The Communist Party

Dear Comrades: New York City, June 10, 1920.

A few days ago the N. Y. Call carried a full-page headline: "FRAINA IMPLICATED AS U. S. GOVERNMENT—COMMUNIST LEADER IS CHARGED WITH INDOSING HIS 'A' Y. CHECKS FROM DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE."

I hasten to inform you that THESE CHARGES ARE FALSE. The Call quotes extensively from a statement issued by S. Nuorteva of the Russian Soviet Bureau, but it also states that Nuorteva scrupulously refrains from making any direct charges against Fraina.

In fact, however, he most unscrupulously raises old charges that have been investigated and found

Peterson's story was given a thorough hearing by the Bureau and C. E. C. members of the Communist Party, and on the basis of the hearing the Executive Council passed the following resolution:

Chicago, Ill. Dec. 17, 1919.

"The members of the Executive Council of the C. P. of A. have carefully examined the stenographic report of the hearing of the charges against Louis Fraina, Internal Sec. of the Party, which report is attested by six New York members of the C. E. C. and declare that the charges have no basis in fact."

The next day would have been to publish the stenographic report of the hearing, but we were informed by the members of the Council can state from personal knowledge that Com. Fraina was in the City of Chicago until late at night on Sept. 1 and that on Nov. 1 and 15 he was in the City of Chicago on Party business.

The Council is unanimous that not the slightest taint of suspicion attaches itself to Com. Fraina as the result of this charge, and declares as fact in him as loyal and trusted comrade unshaken. All the circumstances in the case point to a plot against the Communist Party.

"The Council is in full agreement with Com. Fraina's continuance of his work as Internal Sec. and requests officially, as the representative of the C. P. of A. that he be received as its official representative."

The January meeting of the C. E. C. took the same stand, and issued a statement, which was published in the Call, against continued rumors and innuendos especially circulated in and by the Socialist Party and its press.

The next answer would have been to publish the stenographic report of the hearing, but we were informed by the members of the Council can state from personal knowledge that Com. Fraina was in the City of Chicago until late at night on Sept. 1 and that on Nov. 1 and 15 he was in the City of Chicago on Party business.

However, since the D. of J. apparently has, in some way obtained information about the hearing, and since Nuorteva has seen about come out with his statement—omitting and misstating important facts and circumstances, thus attacking the integrity of the Party—we are now to publish the proceedings in full, and we are going to do that just as soon as possible, thereby to disprove and destroy all charges, all rumors and suspicions.

Nuorteva is a clever and a very unscrupulous man; he writes a statement against Palmer and the D. of J. he does not make any direct charges, but repeats the accusations of a spy, and relates and co-relates various "facts" which appear to support these accusations; "incidentally" he neglected how to a representative of the Communist Party and through him to the Party itself. The Call taking up the cudgel cheerfully and quite "innocently" directing it also against the C. P. of A.

In the order quoted by The Call the charges are as follows:

1) Peterson (a spy of the D. of J. and a "friend" of Nuorteva) "had seen Fraina in the New York office of the D. of J. under circumstances indicating that he must be one of the agents of the department."

2) "Certain information regarding communications with Moscow conveyed to Fraina which had not been in the possession of anyone else outside of our office became known to agents of the D. of J."

3) Peterson reported "that he had seen in the files of the N. Y. office of Palmer's department a returned pay check indorsed by L. Fraina."

4) Peterson "asserting in the face of Fraina that he was the man whom he had learned to know as an agent of the D. of J."

5) "While other members of Fraina's group were being arrested at that time nothing happened to Fraina himself."

6) "Fraina left (for Europe) in company with one of his associates, a Russian doctor in the employ of a British steamship line and obviously a police agent."

7) "The letter (from Rotkies to Martens) could only have been gotten into Mr. Palmer's hands through Mr. Fraina or Dr. Nosovitzky."

8) "Palmer is in possession of all reports from that conference (Amsterdam Conf.), which was supposed to be a secret one, and where no one from America was present except Fraina and Nosovitzky."

The main charges, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, are all based upon the word of a man PROVEN AN UNRELIABLE, CONTRADICTIONARY AND FALSE.

He was positive he had seen Fraina at the D. of J. in New York on the 7th of September, when Fraina was still in Chicago.

The second time he had seen him there between Oct. 1 and Oct. 15—he would not place the date at all.

The third time he was positive he had seen him there on Nov. 3, before noon, then he changed to Nov. 15, then changed back again to Nov. 3, but that he had seen a report made by Fraina on Nov. 15. On Nov. 15 Fraina was again in Chicago, and Nov. 3 he had not left from home before noon.

Peterson's description of Fraina's clothes, sandy black hair, etc., was all wrong. It could not be better since he admitted himself that he had not seen Fraina before those alleged meetings in the D. of J. All he had was a rather vague description by one of his chiefs.

When Peterson was brought in at the hearing where Fraina was present and was asked "Do you think that there is in this room anyone whom you can identify as Fraina?" he answered "No, I would not dare say so." Later he pointed Fraina out by saying that he recognized him by the voice. But when he had seen him only three times, and every time on his way out.

The checks indorsed by "Fraina" and the reports of "Fraina" nobody has seen "except" Peterson, and his imitation of the signature was no imitation of the real signature of Fraina. Peterson's story of trying to get the "documents" to show them to Nuorteva, and that he was arrested and the papers taken from him before he could show them to anybody, sounds absolutely "fishy," not only in general, but in several important details as told by him.

The fact is that "after the testimony had been taken Com. Fraina asked everyone present to state whether he thought that the matter had been sufficiently cleared up so that he could leave the chairman and Com. Weinstein, answered the chairman answered "no." Com. Weinstein reserved his opinion. Among those who said "Yes" there was one member of the Bureau.

Nos. 2 and 7 Nuorteva has nothing more to say. He leaves out of the core of the matter, for example, the possibility that Fraina might be some spy in the Bureau—not a "friend" of Nuorteva.

Charge No. 3 is really ridiculous on the face of it.

By N. LENIN

Ramsey MacDonald with the amusing naivette of a parlor Socialist who merely juggles with words entirely lacking an understanding of their import, not even conscious that preaching a thing requires its being carried out in deeds, says: The Berne Conference made a "concession to the public opinion of non-Socialist elements."

Exactly. We consider the whole Berne "INTERNATIONAL" yellow and treacherous because all its members are traitors to the bourgeoisie.

policies are a "concession" to the bourgeoisie. Ramsey MacDonald perfectly understood that we have to break the Third International and unconditionally severed with the Second, because we were convinced of its hopelessness, its incorrigibility, its playing the game of the bourgeoisie. We were convinced that the bourgeois influence, bourgeois lie, and bourgeois corruption into the working class movement. If Ramsey MacDonald, desiring to discuss the 3rd International, would have asked the question, "What would you do around the question, uses empty phrases and doesn't say what is necessary to be said, it is his fault and his crime. For the proletariat needs the truth and there is no more danger of the truth than a polished, respectable, mediocre lie.

The question of imperialism and its connection with opportunism in the working class movement, with the betrayal of the working class cause by well-to-do leaders has been raised by Marx and Engels during fourty years from 1852 up to 1892 were constantly pointing out, that the working class of England, due to economic peculiarities of that country has been acquiring bourgeois character (or—has been becoming bourgeois in character). Marx went to himself in the seventies of last century hatred and contempt of the leaders of the reformist tendencies of that time, of opportunistic and reformists, for the reason, that he branded many of the leaders of English trade-unions as men sold out to the bourgeoisie or as traitors to the cause of the working class and of labor movement.

During the Anglo-Boer war, the Anglo-Saxon press already put the question of imperialism quite clearly as a new (and the last) stage of Capitalism. If my memory does not fail me, no one else but Ramsey MacDonald resigned from the "Fabian Society,"—this prototype of the Berne International, this cultivator of seed-plots, and exemplar of opportunism characterized by Engels with genius and truth, and the truest in his correspondence with Zorn, as "Fabian Imperialism,"—such was then the current expression in the English Socialist literature. If Ramsey MacDonald forgot about this, so much the worse for him.

"Fabian Imperialism" and "Social Imperialism" this is the same thing: Socialism in words and Imperialism in deeds, the TRANSFORMATION OF SOCIALISM INTO IMPERIALISM. This phenomenon became now during the war 1914-1918 and afterwards, the WORLD EVENT. Inability to understand this is the greatest blindness of the Berne yellow "International" and its crime. Opportunism or reformism must have inevitably grown into SOCIALIST IMPERIALISM. The bourgeoisie of the world, the 300 million nations, robbing the Whole world and thereby allowed the bourgeoisie of these countries to bribe the working class of these countries. Socialism is monopolistic capitalist profit (Imperialism) in the name of the working class. THE WORKING CLASS of these countries,

Those who fail to see the economic inevitability of this fact are absolute ignoramuses or hypocrites, who deceive the workers by repeating the old commonplaces about capitalism and thereby hide the bitter truth of the desertion of a large faction in the Socialist movement on the side of the imperialist bourgeoisie.

From this fact, however, two conclusions resolve themselves.

Conclusion number one: The Berne International is in fact, by its actual historical and political role, regardless of the good intentions and innocent wishes of some or another of its members, AN ORGANIZATION OF AGENTS OF INTERNATIONAL IMPERIALISM, working WITHIN the working class movement, spreading in it bourgeois influence, bourgeois ideas, bourgeois lies and bourgeois corruption.

In the countries with democratic-parliamentary government, the bourgeoisie has learned how to act perfectly honestly and lawfully, but also through deceit, bribery, flattery, in the "English" approved methods. The "duncheons" of the bourgeoisie lead the masses of the workers and peasants not become famous for nothing, and even in the countries with democratic-parliamentary government, they had already spoken of them as "the bourgeoisie" by the war-time reception of the social-traitor Merzhennikov by the Barin, and the cowardly reception of leaders of the Entente, and so forth and so on. The ministers of the crown, and we will buy them,"—said one clever Hyndman, who described in his reminiscences of the war this lady, more farsighted than all the leaders of the "international" put together,—had estimated the "international" by the actual results in teaching Socialist leaders from the working-

During the war, when Vandervelde was working class, and this whole band of rascals were arranging international conferences, the French bourgeois papers were screaming and crying cleverly: these Vanderveldes are suffering from a kind of epilepsy, a kind of spasm or convulsion. People thus afflicted cannot utter sentences without suffering a strange convulsion of the face and neck. In this manner the Vanderveldes cannot come out politic. But, without words like a parrot: internationalism, socialism, the proletarian, international solidarity, revolution of the proletariat, etc., etc., they repeat sacramental phrases they wish, provided only they shall serve us capitalists and workers by the nose, imperialism war and in enslaving the workers of the world. From English bourgeois can sometimes be very clever. They know perfectly how to estimate the lackey role of the Belgians.

tionally. L'orlov has written somewhere: you, "Boisheviki," are denouncing the Berne International, but your own friend L'orlov states in it that you only know that L'orlov fights for the Third International. Truly, honestly and heroically. When the workers in Moscow, in 1903, during a meeting for the "police-socialism," a workmanman, Babushkin, asked those meetings in order to fight against Zubatov's influence in the "Bogatovschina," and to whom I knew from 1934, when he was a "Bolshevik" propaganda circle in Petrograd, one of the best and most devoted of workmen — "Iskrist," leaders of the revolutionary proletariat — "Iskrist,"** leaders of the revolutionary proletariat, and who was shot by Rennenkampf in Siberia in 1906, — was just as little a "Zubatov adherent" as Lebedev is Berne's adherent."

Conclusion number two: The Third, the Communist International has been organized just for the purpose of not allowing the "Socialists" to get away with such lip-service recognition of the revolution, examples of which Ramsay MacDonald gives in his article. The lip-service recognition of the revolution, in reality covering up thoroughly opportunistic, reformistic, and petty bourgeois policies, which are the direct progeny of the Second International, against which we are waging the death struggle.

When they say: "The Second International died, suffering shamefully from bankruptcy,—it must be understood that it means the bankruptcy and death of opportunism, reformism and petty-bourgeois Socialism. Because the Second International has its historical value, has accomplished some good, namely: which a conscious worker cannot neglect, namely: formation of mass co-operative trade unions and political organizations, works utilization or bourgeois organizations, as well as all institutions of bourgeois democracy in general, etc.

bourgeoisie, to really defeat opportunism, which brought the Second International to a shameful death, in order to help the approaching revolution, which even Ramsay MacDonald has not hesitated to acknowledge. First, to conduct all the propaganda and agitation from the point of view of the revolution, in contradistinction to reformism, systematically explaining to the masses this contradiction and to actually and practically carry out every step of the parliamentary, union and other kind of work. Not by any means to reject (excepting special cases of course), utilization of parliamentarism and all the reforms, but to consider them only as a by-product of the revolutionary, proletarian class struggle. Not a single party of the Berne International has satisfied this condition. Second, to show even an understanding of how the propaganda and agitation must be conducted by explaining the difference between reform and revolution, how necessary it is to the masses of both the party and the masses for the revolution.

evolution. It is not necessary to combine legal (open) and illegal (underground) work. The Bolsheviki had taught this especially and insistently during the war of 1914-1918, while the heroes of contemptible opportunism were free to sell their souls and praise the lawfulness, "democracy," "freedom" of the Western European countries, republics etc. Now, only plain swindlers, bent upon deceiving the workers, can deny that the Bolsheviki were proven right. The workers have advanced and most "free" of the bourgeois republics, where the rule of the bourgeois terror does not reign, where freedom for agitation for the workers is the official program of the organization in this direction has not been forbidden. A PARTY, WHICH BY THIS TIME DOES NOT RECOGNIZE THAT UNDER THE REIGN OF THE BOURGEOISIE, A PARTY DOES NOT CARRY OUT SYSTEMATIC EMBROIDERED UNDERGROUND WORK, IN SPITE OF THE LAWS OF THE BOURGEOISIE AND BOURGEOIS PARLIAMENTS, IS A PARTY OF TRAITORS AND SCOUNDRELS.—A PARTY, WHICH IN THE LEADERSHIP OF THE REVOLUTION OF THE REVOLUTION IS FOOLING THE MASSES* THE PLACE FOR SUCH PARTIES IS THE YELLOW BERNE "INTERNATIONAL" THEY CANNOT BE. (U.S.S.R. 2/18/21)

Thatcher (theirs ours) and merciless war must be waged for the absolute expulsion from the working class movement of those opportunist leaders, who showed themselves before the war, and especially during the war, in the field of politics as well as in the field of economics. The bourgeoisie is the theory of "neutrality" is a hypocritical and contemptible subterfuge which helped the bourgeoisie to gain a hold upon the masses in 1914. The revolution is the only way to the liberation of the masses, while in deeds do not carry out the revolution, for the influence of the revolutionary—and only the revolutionary party, in all and every mass working class organizations—are parties of traitors.

Fourth.—It is impossible to reconcile their condemnation of imperialism in words, while in deeds they do not wage revolutionary war for the liberation of imperialist (and dependent) nations from their imperialist bondage. This is the policy of agents of the bourgeoisie in the working class movement. Such a party, English, French, German, Dutch, American, etc., will be hostile toward imperialism while in deeds it does not wage the revolutionary struggle within the colonies against the imperialist bourgeoisie, which does not help systematically the revolutionary forces of the colonies which has already begun everywhere, the revolution against imperialism. Such a party is not literature for the use of the revolutionary masses and there is a party of soundrels and traitors.

Fifth.—The "theory" of the Bernstein party is a common of the parties of the bourgeoisie. It is a typical phenomenon in words to recognize the revolution, and to help the revolution, while in deeds they write flowery phrases about the revolution, while they do not help the revolution to display the reformist attitude toward such beginnings, which are the first revolutionary manifestations of the mass struggle of the mass against the breaking bourgeois laws, stepping beyond the bourgeois legality, such as for instance, the mass strikes, street demonstrations, etc. for instance, mass meetings among the troops, distribution of Any hero of the Berne "International," asked whether his party is carrying on such systematic work, will reply either with evasive phrases, screening an absence of such work; lack of organization and machinery for it and inability of his party to carry it on, or with a declamation against "fire-eating anarchists," etc. But just this constitutes the weakness of the Berne "International" to the working class,—its actual desertion into the camp of the bourgeois.

All the scoundrel-leaders of the Berne "International" have on their lips declarations of their "sympathy" toward revolution in general, and * "Iskristi," or, "Iskrovtsy"—followers of the magazine "Iskra," started by Lenin and Plechanov in Switzerland in 1903 and which was instrumental in bringing together all revolutionary-Marxian forces within the Russian Social-Democratic Labor Party and led to their victory over the so-called "economists" at the 2nd Party Convention in 1904.

* Gentlemen of the Socialist Party of America, the Socialist Labor Party (and all other advocates of "legality," as, for instance, Y. F. and his friends), please accept the compliment.

toward the Russian revolution in particular. But only hypocrites and fools cannot understand that the exceedingly rapid successes of the Revolution in Russia are the result of the work of many years of the revolutionary party in the above-indicated underground work, which was systematically for years of an underground (illegal) work, as for the leadership of demonstrations and strikes, and the work among the troops, of the study and creation of underground literature, summing up the experience, and educating the whole party to the idea of the necessity of revolution, training and preparing leaders of the masses for such occasions, etc., etc.

The document and the most fundamental differences summarizes all of the above, and explains the inconsistency in reconcilable theoretical and practical political positions of the revolutionary proletariat with the Berne "Interim" as the questions of the conversion of Imperialism into civil war and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

The infection of the Berne "International" with bourgeois ideology is best exposed in having failed to understand (or not wishing to understand, or simulating ignorance) the imperialist nature of the war of 1914-1918, it did not realize the inevitability of its conversion into a civil war between the proletariat and the bourgeoisie of all the advanced countries.

When the Bolsheviks as early as November of 1918 pointed out this inevitability, the Philistines among these Philistines supported with stupid-ridicule, and Berne "International." At present all the leaders of the imperialist war into a civil war have been a fact in a number of countries, not only in Russia, in neutral Sweden, in France, in Hungary, in Germany, even civil war is being noticeably felt in all the advanced countries without exception.

Now, to pass over this question in silence (as does Ramsey MacDonald) is to dispose of the question of inevitable civil war by using the question of inevitable civil war to dispose of the question of inevitable civil war. This is a class, is equivalent to direct treason to the working side of the bourgeoisie. It is going over to the leaders of the bourgeoisie for real political good the inevitability of civil war as a thoroughly understood, automatically carrying out their preparations for strengthening their position in anticipation of just such an event.

Employment and the forces at their command exacting gigantic energy, mind and determination, not shrinking before the most bestial determination, the whole countries to hunger, disease and starvation, the people of all the world are preparing to suppress the proles of the world in this civil war. But the heroes of the independence movements like fools, or hypocritical preachers of mendicant piety, continue to harp on the old, more abhorrent or more repulsive. There is no sight more pathetic than the old world, the old world with the Donalds continue scaring the capitalists of civil war, in order to frighten the bourgeoisie from the path. To this end only resolve themselves to all the writing, philosophy and politics of the Berne "International".

All the writings of Kautsky as well as our Menshevik and Social-revolutionists present substantially this sort of portrayal, the whimpering of a cowardly philistine who is afraid of revolution.

We have no possibility to repeat here in detail the fundamental economic causes make this revolutionary, and only revolutionary path inevitable and render any different solution of the problems placed by history on the order of the day impossible—except through civil war. It must be written and volumes will be written on this question. Messrs. Kautsky and other leaders of the "Bernese International" do not understand this—but we need only add that this is their distinct

By K. HORNER

Editorial Note. This article (written by a German) presents only one chapter of the pamphlet dealing with the question of mass action in the early tactical problems confronting the revolutionary proletariat in general and the revolutionary proletariat in Germany in particular. Therefore, this article is necessarily incomplete, resting upon certain aspects of the problem only in a very general way, without entering very deeply into the questions, and without touching upon certain questions at all. Moreover, the article from which this article is reprinted, having been published in Germany, in response to a certain political situation, on certain questions, created in the course of the revolutionary working class movement in that particular country, and by necessity, has been narrowed in its scope and in its application (and even in its political illustrations) to the specific needs and requirements of that country.

Consequently, this article, in order to justify its title, needs a great deal of elaboration and additional explanation.

However, leaving this and a more elaborate treatment of the problem in question, to future articles on Mass Action and allied problems which it is our intion to publish in The Communist, we shall limit this editorial note to a few remarks absolutely essential and indispensable, in our opinion.

2) It should be noted that the article, reprinted below, does not tackle the question of Mass Action in its entirety, does not analyze the different forms of Mass Action, such as for instance, mass demonstrations, strikes, armed insurrection, etc., and the conditions of support. The article takes only one aspect of mass action, namely, its directness, or direct character,—as opposed to the indirect character of parliamentary action. We were not able to find any other action, or any other action that does not act directly, but through the medium of some intermediary agencies, such as parliamentary and diplomatic representatives, and 'leaders'. Thus, the scope of the article may be formulated as: direct vs. indirect action.

2) Even this, more limited problem is not treated exhaustively, being mainly confined to parallels taken from the history of the German working class movement, between the attitude of the old Social-Democratic "leaders" and the present Communist attitude.

There are two kinds of leaders—the former (represented by Scheidemanns, Kautskys, Mac Donalds, Snowdens, Longuets, etc.) act, if supplant the masses without any attempt or even an idea to call upon the masses for action to organize the masses into a party, without taking the masses into the account, and against the masses, if not always, against the interests of the masses. These are "leaders" who want their army—the masses—to perform only one "action": to elect them into office, and then to disappear. They are ready to go away to fight, they expect to accomplish everything through their wisdom and "diplomatic" manipulations.

The latter—the true leaders, are those who act together with the masses; who prepare them for mass action, and when the time comes—they lead the masses in their assaults upon the enemy.

These leaders are repented by Lenin, Trotsky and Scheidemann. We often hear cries raised against "leaders"—these leaders are this and that—we must get rid of leaders—they cannot be trusted, etc. etc. In this connection we should remember the old proverb that we should not throw out the child together with the dirty water. In throwing away from the working class movement, such "leaders" as Scheidemann, Noske and Kautsky, we should not throw out such leaders as Lenin and Trotsky, whose role and importance in the revolutionary, proletarian movement cannot be overestimated.

The antagonism between Communism and Social-Democracy had already become evident before the war, although not under this name. At that time it related to tactics. Under the name of "Left Radicals" ("Linksradikale") an opposition manifested itself in the ranks of the Social-Democracy (out of which originated the older adherents of the present-day Communists), who, in spite of the opposition of the radicals and revisionists proved the necessity of mass action. In the period of the revolution, such as Kautsky, were forced to reveal the anti-revolutionary character of their views and tactics.

political character of their views and tactics. The parliamentary and trade-union struggle under the influence of a strong social imperialism had slightly ameliorated the conditions of the working class, and, at the same time, had erected a bulwark against the ever-lasting tendency of the bourgeoisie to exploit the workers. In the last decade, this bulwark, despite the powerful organization, broke down, imperialism strengthened the power of capitalism and of militarism, the bourgeoisie was forced to turn to the trade-unions to take a defensive position, and prepared the world war. It became clear that the old weapons of waging the class struggle had become obsolete. The masses of the working class in all countries they were actually seen to be engaged in activities, often against the will of their leaders,—now in tremendous trade-union congresses, now in mass meetings, now in organized industrial life, or else, in demonstrations of a political nature very often the eruption of the proletarian revolt and the show of its power so overwhelming that the bourgeoisie had to grant concessions. Oftimes, too, these outbreaks were throttled by massacres. The Social Democratic leaders seek to use these movements as a means to achieve their ends, and to attain aims. They acknowledge the usefulness of political strikes for definite purposes to be tolerated only on the condition that they be waged within prearranged limits, and that they be directed at the command of the leaders. And, above all, in tactical questions to be subordinated to the interests of the leaders. In the case of political strikes, they have been waged at times. But of no avail. The policy of compromise introduced by the leaders usually paralyzes the powerful force of the masses. The policy of compromise is to be subordinated to this policy of compromise. Moreover, the menace of danger which inspires the reigning bourgeoisie the feeling of uncertainty, the feeling of the possibility of actions can take on and grow into a revolutionary movement—was absent from both of the "disciplined" mass actions of harmlessness, had been precluded by advance.

The revolutionary Marxists, the present Communists, saw even then the narrowness of the program of the ranks of the Social Democrats. They knew that throughout all history the masses, even the classes, were the driving and active power in all revolutions; that revolutions never came about through the reasoned and wise counsels and procedure of the acknowledged leaders. When conditions became unendurable, the masses, for any cause whatsoever, would overthrow the old order and roll into power a new class or stratum capable of erecting a state or society to suit their needs. Only during

In the last half century or comparatively peaceful development could the illusion be created that their superior wisdom, direct contact with the peoples of the world, the members of Parliament, of official and of local administrative committees believe that their direct speech and their direct action and resolutions determine the course of events, the mass understanding behind them are or occasionally make purpose or assurance when they are called for the spokesmen, only again pass to the words of their from the political horizon. The mass disappear a passive role merely, it has to elect leaders no longer act as the effective force of revolution. The revolution has only a very limited value in regard to former revolutions. It has only a very limited value of less value when the great difference between the bourgeois and proletarian revolutions is taken into consideration. The proletarian revolution is taken into account of workers and the petty bourgeois revolutions the mass action but once (as in Paris in February 1848) and only for a short time. The proletarian Revolution, for the purpose of the great French old empire or a new untenable power like the then the republic. When they had performed their task, they have appeared as new individuals, as a new government, in order to reconstruct and renew the old State. The proletarian revolution is the laws. The proletarian mass power was needed to overthrow the old order but not to build up the new order. The proletarian system of society was the organization of a new society.

According to this model the radical Social-Democrats also conceived the proletarian revolution, which they—contrary to the reformers—considered necessary. In their eyes, a tremendous uprising of the people was to remove the old absolutist military domination, put the Social-Democrats into power, and the Social-Democrats will do the rest, and through the enactment of new laws would create the Socialist order. Thus did they conceive the proletarian revolution. But this revolution is an entirely different thing. The proletarian revolution is the liberation of the

That means that they themselves take the reins of the revolution. They are not the old race of narrow-minded slaves who only think of themselves and cannot see further than their workshop, new beings must evolve—defiant, ready to sacrifice, capable of understanding the strength of solidarity, no longer confused by the treacherous bourgeois teachings, and capable of independently adjusting themselves to the conditions of the revolution. They must, through want, bitter disappointment, occasional victories and repeated defeats, gradually gain the power, the firm unity, and the ripe understanding necessary for the successful process of struggle is the proletarian revolution.

The duration of this process will differ according to the countries, and will depend mainly upon the power of the resistance put forth by the dominant class. The reason that the process was terminated with comparative speed in Russia was due to the fact that the bourgeoisie was not a dominant class in combination with the landed aristocracy drove the peasants on the side of the working class. The great institution of power of the bourgeoisie is the state, which is an intricate and branched organization of domination with all the means for exerting power at its command—legislation, the schools, the police, the courts, the army and the bureaucracy that has all the direct, indirect or all the channels of public life in its hands.

Revolution is the combat of the proletariat against this machinery of power of the ruling class, and it can only attain their liberation by confronting this hostile organization by a more formidable and powerful organization. The State is the organization of the power of the ruling workers powerless, divided and intimidated in order to crush the slightest strivings toward unity by force and deception and divide their forces. The direction of the struggle is to power the working class applies mass action, which paralyzes the state machinery and causes it to crumble. As long as the state remains intact and intact it will be able to resist and over and over again will it see the State rise against it. The conflict then—that if the world is not to go down into utter ruin and chaos must be so, and so, the final and repeated military actions of the proletariat crushes the bureaucratic state machinery and it breaks down power.

1855. Kautsky took exception to the interpretation of the proletarian revolution even before the war. He maintained that the proletariat should not be guided by the tactics which would have been worked out by the Social-Democrats. It would have to use his state machinery for proletariat in order to enact the laws in its own purposes. All the ministers of the proletariat would be the representatives of the interests of the workers. The aim of the proletariat must be to seize and not to destroy the state machinery. The Social-Democratic connection as to how the state machinery of the victorious proletariat would be created—whereas it would be a continuation of the bourgeois state machinery—must be maintained and re-constructed machinery. But the Social-Democratic theories as they were formulated and propagated by Kautsky and his followers, the Social-Democrats, the economics of capitalism out of which Socialism would "necessarily" originate. They never dealt with the "how" and for that reason the question of the tactics of the revolution could not be answered. It was only later explained. The difference between the Communist and Social-Democratic interpretations had now ever become quite evident.

For the Social-Democrats, the sole act of the uprising of the people, which overthrows the old power and places the Social-Democrats in government, constitutes the revolution. The State constitutes proletarian revolution. The overthrow of the Hohenzollerns in Germany on November 7, 1918, was for them a real proletarian revolution, although the old regime had been disorganized by warfare, made victory attainable without difficulty. For the Communists this revolt could only be the beginning of the abolition of the old oppression opened the way for the working class, so that they could, through the creation of their own class organization, under the leadership of the Social-Democrats allowed and even aided in the building up of the old state power upon a firmer basis, after a moment of confusion. They are still engaged in the civil war struggle. For them and his friends Germany is a true Social-Democratic republic—Noacke and his Imperial Guard (Reichswache) are simply dead bourgeois elements who must be exterminated as a class aid in winning it, even if they do not rule. Most certain

They, they could not expect Socialism thus far. Kautsky had emphasized again and again that the Social Revolution—according to the Marxists—must not come all of a sudden, but is a long historical process. It must be ripe for an industrial revolution. In other words, it must be ripe for a proletarian revolution to take place. The proletariat must allow itself to be exploited, and then by degrees be able to organize itself. It would be nationalized. Or, in plainer language, the Social-Democratic ministers at the head of the government, the old capitalism with its exploitation remains. That is the Social-Democratic conception: after a single step, the Social-Democratic uprising there must follow in the footsteps of the Communists. It is a longer process of socialization. Communism takes the position of maintaining that the proletarian revolution—the complete abolition of power and industry—is a long process of mass maturity and attains wisdom. The proletarian becomes mature and attains wisdom. The old state machinery is destroyed. At the same time, the struggle when the power is in the hands of the proletariat is a short work made of exploitation, the abolition of exploitation to unearned revenue will be proclaimed, and on this road and just foundation will be constructed a new machinery—industrial machinery—organized, systematic mechanism of production.

They cannot evade the tribunal of the revolutionary workers.

6.
Ramsay MacDonald gets away from the question of the Dictatorship of the Proletariat with a few words, as from the subject for a discussion about freedom an democracy.

No. It is high time to act. Discussions are too

The most dangerous—coming from the Bernese "International"—is the lip-service recognition of the Dictatorship of the Proletariat. (Italics ours. Ed.) These men are apt to recognize anything, to sign anything, in order to remain at the head of the working class movement. Kautsky already says that he is not opposed to the Dictatorship of the Proletariat. French social-patriots and "Centrists" also sign under the resolution for the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

They do not deserve any confidence whatsoever. Not lip-service recognition is necessary, but the actual rupture with the policies of reformism, with the prejudices of bourgeois freedom, bourgeois democracy, the actual carrying on of the struggle of the revolutionary class struggle.

They attempt to recognize the Dictatorship of the Proletariat in words, in order secretly to read into it the "will of the majority" "general suffrage" (Kautsky precisely is doing this thing) bourgeois parliamentarism, the refusal for the complete destruction of the bourgeois state machinery. We should guard ourselves against these new tricks, against these new lackeys of reform-

ism more than anything else. The Dictatorship of the Proletariat would be impossible if the majority of the population did not consist of proletarians and semi-proletarians. Kautsky & Co. attempt to falsify this truth by preventing the necessity of the "Vote of the Majority," in order to accept the Dictatorship of the Proletariat. * (Italics ours. Ed.)

Comical pedants. They did not understand that generally not through the ballot, but through civil war are all the serious problems of politics decided at that time, when the Dictatorship of the Proletariat has been placed on the order of the day by history.

They did not understand that the Dictatorship of the Proletariat is the power of one class taking into its hands the whole apparatus, the whole machinery of the new state, conquering the bourgeoisie and neutralizing its resistance. The petty-bourgeoisie, the Kautskys and the MacDonalds give lip-recognition to the class-struggle, in order, in reality to forget about it in the future. At the moment in the history of the class-struggle for the emancipation of the proletariat: in the moment, when the proletariat, having captured the state power, and supported by the semi-proletariat and with the assistance of this power, is classing the

Like true philistines, the leaders of the Bernese "International" are repeating the bourgeois-democratic phrases about liberty, equality and democracy, not noticing, that they are repeating the obsolete merchant ideas of "free and equal," a.d. failing to understand that the proletariat needs the state not for "freedom," but for the suppression of his enemy, the exploiter and the capitalist. (Italics ours. Ed.)

The liberty and the equality of the merchant died, as died capitalism. Neither the Kautskys nor MacDonald will be able to resurrect it. The proletarian needs the abolition of classes—this is the real meaning of proletarian democracy, proletarian freedom (freedom from the capitalist and from the capitalist system), proletarian equality (not the equality of classes—a commonplace into which the Kautskys and MacDonalds fall, but the equality of workers, who should abolish the capitalists).

I cannot develop here in more detail these ideas, expounded by me in the "State and Revolution" and in the brochure "Proletarian Democracy and the Renegade Kautsky." I may conclude by dedicating these notes to the delegates to the Luzerne Congress of August 10, 1919, of the Berne "International."

Greetings To Communists Abroad

By N. LENIN.

The followers of Scheidemann and of Kautzky are still talking of "democracy" in general; they still cling to the ideas of 1848. They talk of "bourgeois democracy," but their deeds are those of Louis Blanc. They talk of "majority" rule in the belief that equality at the ballot box is equivalent to equality as between exploiter and exploited, the worker and the capitalist, the poor and the rich, the hungry and the well fed.

The Scheidemanns and Kautzkis behave as if the time, honest, noble, peace-loving capitalists had never made use of the forces of wealth, money, capital, bureaucracy, military dictatorship but they always in truth applied the majority rule in the decision of public affairs.

The Scheidemanns and Kautzkis (partly from hypocrisy and partly from the desire to keep out of the way of reformist activity) are bolstering up bourgeois democracy, bourgeois parliamentarism and the bourgeois republic, and are endeavoring to make the voices heard by the exploiters as conducting State business according to the will of the majority, and not according to the will of the capitalists, poor by means of deceit and oppression of the poor by the rich.

The Scheidemanns and the Kautzkis are willing to recognize the proletarian revolution provided that it is not the proletarian revolution which is guilty of hypocrisy when it invested the hollow parliamentary equality with the high-sounding name of "democracy," while it oppressed, exploited, and made use of the trick of the workers and the poorest peasants. The imperialistic war, which the Scheidemanns and Kautzkis were so sincerely bolstering up, has revealed this fact to millions of people. The dictatorship of the proletariat is the only means of protection for the workers from the yoke of capitalism, from the military dictatorship of the bourgeoisie, and from imperialistic wars. It is the only step which will lead to equality and true democracy, not a democracy on paper and consisting of political phrases, but a live democracy, based on economic freedom with it. The Scheidemanns and Kautzkis, having failed to grasp these facts, have proved themselves of bourgeois ideas.

The Kautzky or "Independent" party is dying and will inevitably be finally destroyed by the dissensions between the revolutionary majority of its members and the counter-revolutionary "leaders."

The Communist Party will grow in strength and experience, living down the dissensions which are similar in character to those which confronted the Bolsheviks.

"As far as I can judge, the dissensions among the German Communists are centered around the question of 'making use of legal possibilities' (to use the Bolshevik terminology of 1900-12). To put it plainly the question is—should bourgeois parliaments, reactionary trade-unions, (Gompers, G. L. P., etc.), mutilated by the Scheidemanns and Kautzkis, be made use of, or should they be boycotted? We, Russian Bolsheviks, had to go through the same kind of dissension in 1905-1912, and we can plainly see that many young German Communists are simply suffering from lack of revolutionary experience. Had they lived through a couple of bourgeois revolutions (1905 and 1917, they would not be such ardent advocates of the boycott and they would not, at times, fall into the errors of Syndicalism.

Those are growing pains which will pass with the growth of the movement which is developing splendidly. These obvious mistakes must be fought against quite openly and the dissensions must be taken not to magnify the dissensions, for it must be clear to everyone that in the near future the struggle for the dictatorship of the proletariat and for the Soviets will do away with most of these dissensions.

From the point of view of Marxist theories, as well as from that of the experience of three revolutions (1848, February 1917, and October 1917), I most decidedly consider it a great mistake to refuse participation in bourgeois Parliaments, reactionary trade-unions, (Gompers, G. L. P., etc.), and in the most reactionary workers' societies, disfigured and mutilated by the Scheidemanns, etc. At times, under certain conditions, in certain countries the boycott is the correct policy. For instance was the boycott of the Czarist Duma by the Bolsheviks in 1904. But these same Bolsheviks took part in a far more reactionary and downright counter-revolutionary Duma in 1907. The Bolsheviks participated in the elections to the bourgeois Constituent Assembly in 1917, and in 1918 they disposed of the profound influence of the small-bourgeois democrats, the Kautzkis and other "Socialist" renegades. We took part in the most reactionary purely Menshevik trade-unions which, in the matter of counter-revolutionism, are on a par with Legism's infamous and most reactionary trade-unions in Germany. Even now, two years after the conquest of State power, we are still struggling with the remnants of the Menshevik (that is to say, the Scheidemann, Kautzky, Gompers) trade-unions, which goes to prove that this is a long and tedious process, and that in certain localities and in certain unions the influence of small-bourgeois ideas is still very great.

To begin with, we were in a minority in the Soviets, the Trade-Unions, and the Communist Party. It is only by prolonged hard work and struggle, before, as well as after the conquest of political power, that we obtained a majority in all the Labor organizations, and later on in the non-Labor, and still later in the organizations of the small peasants.

Only fools or knaves can imagine that the proletariat must, in the first place, obtain a majority in a ballot conducted by the bourgeois and their hired slaves, and that only then it can arrive for power. Such reasoning is the height of stupidity or hypocrisy: it is the substitution of the ballot box under the old regime, the old order, for the class struggle and the revolution.

The proletariat carries on its class struggle without waiting for the ballot. The ballot is only, although the sympathy of the majority of the workers, and consequently of the population, is required to ensure the success of a strike. The proletariat carries its class struggle, overthrowing the bourgeoisie, without waiting for a preliminary ballot conducted by the bourgeois, but it knows all the time that for the successful overthrow of the bourgeoisie it is essential to have the sympathy of the majority of the workers, and consequently of the majority of the population.

The Parliamentary cretins and modern Louis Blancs insist on a ballot, and a ballot conducted by the bourgeoisie in order to ascertain the amount of that sympathy of the majority of the workers. But those are the views of pedants or clever tricksters.

The history of real revolutions shows that the sympathy of the majority cannot very often be proved by any kind of ballot and certainly not by a ballot organized by the exploiters, notwithstanding the existence of the "equality" as between exploiters and the exploited.

The sympathy of the majority of the workers very frequently finds expression not through the ballot box but by the growth of one of the parties, or by the increased number of that party's members in the Soviets, or by the success of some strike which for some reason or other had assumed great importance, or by success in the civil war, etc., etc.

The history of our revolution has, for instance, shown that the approval of the proletariat, shown by the majority of the workers in the extensive territories of Siberia and the Urals did not manifest itself by the vote, but by a year's experience of the rule of the exploiters of the Czarist general Kolchak. We must bear in mind that Kolchak's rule also began with a coalition of the Scheidemanns and Kautzkis (translated into Russian the Mensheviks and the Social-Revolutionaries, the partisans of the Constituent Assembly), just as to-day in Germany Messrs. Haase and Scheidemann, with their coalition, are paving the way for the "Color and Landlord." Here I should like to say, in parenthesis, that the Haase-Scheidemann coalition has come to an end inside the Government, but the political conflict of the betrayers of Socialism remains. Proofs of this are Kautzky's books, Stamper's articles in the "Vorwärts" and articles by their followers on their "unity" and so on.

The proletarian revolution can be achieved unless the workers give their sympathy and support to its vanguard. But this sympathy and support cannot be gained all at once, nor will it be determined through the ballot box, but they will be obtained by a long, difficult and hard class struggle. The class struggle of the proletariat for the support of the majority of the workers does not end with the conquest of political power. After this conquest, the same struggle continues, but assumes a different character. In the Russian Revolution all the circumstances were exceptionally favorable to the proletariat in its struggle for dictatorship. The proletarian revolution took place at a time when the entire nation was armed, and when the entire peasantry was in the forefront of the landowners, and was incensed at the Kautzkyan policy of the traitor-Socialists, the Mensheviks and Social-Revolutionaries.

But even in Russia, where the circumstances were so favorable, there was an immediate unity of the entire proletariat and the entire army and peasantry, even then it took the proletariat months and years to gain the support of the majority of the workers in its struggle for dictatorship. After two years this struggle is almost at an end, but even now the proletariat cannot say that the contest has been absolutely settled in its favor. It has taken us two years to gain the entire sympathy and support of the vast majority of the workers and working peasants in Great Russia, in including the Urals and Siberia, but we have not yet achieved that result with the majority of the working peasants (as distinct from the exploiting peasants) in the Ukraine. We may be crushed, and yet we shall not be crushed by the counter-revolutionary power of the Entente. In the interior of Russia we enjoy now such a solid support from the majority of the workers that there never has been, in the entire history of the world, a more democratic State.

Anyone who chooses to make a close study of this extremely complicated and long history of the proletarian fight for power, will see its manifold forms, sudden changes and transitions from one form of struggle to another. Will recognize the error of those who wish to "prohibit" all participation in bourgeois Parliaments, in the reactionary trade-unions, in Czarist or "Scheidemann" workers' committees, or in workshop Soviets, etc., etc. This error is the outcome of the revolutionary inexperience of the sincere, convinced, heroic revolutionaries of the working class. That is why Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg were a thousand times right when in January, 1919, they recognized and pointed out this mistake, but preferred to still remain with the erring proletarian revolutionaries (erring in a matter of secondary importance) than to side with the betrayers of Socialism, the Scheidemanns and Kautzkis who did not err on the question of participation in the bourgeois Parliament, but had ceased to be Socialists and had become small-bourgeois democrats.

But a mistake is a mistake. It must be criticized, and one must endeavor to rectify it. The struggle of the proletariat for power must be relentless; but it must not be a struggle for or against participation in bourgeois Parliaments, reactionary trade-unions, etc. This would constitute an enormous error, and it would lead to the error to recede from Marxist ideas and from the practical line, a strong, centralized political party, to the ideas and tactics of Syndicalism. The chief endeavor of the party should be to participate in bourgeois Parliaments, in the reactionary trade-unions, in the "workshop committees," crippled and castrated as Scheidemann, in fact to participate in every organization, in order to be in continuous touch with the workers and to exercise the influence of the Communist Party on the working masses. At all costs legal work must be combined with illegal in order to bring about systematically the strict control of the illegal party and its working class organization through the legal activities. This is not easy, but there are not and cannot be "easy tasks" and "comfortable" means of struggle for the proletariat.

This difficult task must somehow be fulfilled. The recognition or non-recognition of the armed rising of the proletariat is not the chief difference (the chief difference) between us and the Scheidemanns and Kautzkis. The chief and fundamental difference between us and the Scheidemanns and Kautzkis is that they may even treat the policy in every field of action, bourgeois Parliament, trade-unions, co-operative societies and organizations, as a matter of expediency.

We must fight on every field of action, without any exceptions whatsoever, against the social-traitors, against reformism and opportunism. Only with these masses that we have created, only with the Marxian centralized political party will lead the people without fail to the victorious dictatorship of the proletariat, to the proletarian democracy, to the bourgeois democracy, to the Soviet republic, to the Socialist world order.

The Third International has won a series of brilliant victories in the course of a few months. It grows with a remarkable rapidity. Its frequent errors are not its fault, but the errors of us. By constant and open criticism of these errors we shall bring the working masses of all the cultural countries to the point of complete agreement with the Liebknechts and Kautzkis of all nations; those who have not yet rayed Socialism are to be found in all countries.

The victory of Communism is inevitable.

Who Is Santeri Nuorteva?

June 16th, 1920.

I would advise you not to take too seriously the accusations raised by Mr. Nuorteva against Comrade Lenin. At least we, in Massachusetts, cannot do so knowing Mr. Nuorteva and his activity in the Socialist Party in Massachusetts. You might just as well believe Nuorteva's Menshevik friends in Russia, when they call Lenin a German spy and agent of the Kaiser.

This is not the first occasion where Nuorteva has co-operated with the police powers of the capitalist state. He is one of a group of Finnish yellows, who, after expelling the revolutionary elements from the Finnish Federation of the Socialist Party in 1912, denounced them to THE POLICE AND COURTS AS ANARCHISTS, SYNDICALISTS, etc., in order to steal their property.

In his Socialist Party activities Nuorteva has always been the worst kind of social-patriot and traitor to the working class. To prove that I will cite a few characteristic examples: Dealing with Mass. State Socialist Party Fitchburg Convention in 1915, where yours truly happened to be a delegate, and where Mr. Nuorteva with his bloc of yellow Finns and Menshevik Letts showed his skill in political "identifying" (pulling the "reel" out of Bolshevik motions and resolutions), Nuorteva acted as the only spokesman of that bloc, because practically all of his delegates did not understand or could not speak in English, but only raised their hands in voting as soon as Nuorteva raised his.

Our first resolution, to congratulate Comrade Liebknecht for his stand taken against the war, "the peace and 'burfriedens'" was defeated by Mr. Nuorteva and his bloc, on the ground that the workers SHOULD defend their "fatherland" and that every body should do it.

When we pointed out the attitude of the Russian Bolshevik party (then Russian Social-Democratic Labor Party), Nuorteva dismissed them as a set of irresponsible scoundrels.

At the same convention we presented a resolution on "Dick's Military Law," pending in the U. S. Senate at that time, and proposing forced military training. Our resolution advised our young comrades and sympathizers to refuse to become cannon-fodder. Mr. Nuorteva gave us the following advice: THIS IS NOT RUSSIA BUT AMERICA. This is a free country and we must all obey the law. Once it is passed, "Law and Order" will and our resolution was defeated.

At the same time U. S. agents of the capitalist class were ready to invade Mexico for the glory of Standard Oil Company. We presented a resolution, calling on the working class to refuse to go to fight, but in case they are forced to fight, they should fight against their only enemy—the capitalist class of this country.

"Treason" and "traitors" were the only arguments of Mr. Nuorteva against us. He pointed out to Nuorteva, that he cannot avoid being a traitor. He should only decide, whether to become a traitor to the working class of U. S. and Mexico, or commit treason against Standard Oil, and then there again showed that he is a traitor to the working class by defeating our resolution.

On the same day (Sunday), a well-known minister of the Gospel in Boston preached a sermon on the subject "WAR IS HELL. CHRISTIANS SHOULD NOT GO THERE," and called upon his congregation to refuse to serve in any army.

But you may argue, Nuorteva is a Bolshevik now. If so, just read his "Open Letter to American Liberals," and you will see that he is just a plain, everyday middle-class liberal and nothing more. As to his connections with the Soviet, Bureau, there also Mr. Hilgert, the great Red Army slayer; Mr. Nuorteva, ex-inspector of ammunition under the regime of bloody Nicolas II, and a "Christian" and a "worthy" Menshevik, who always fought against Bolshevism in Russia and in this country, and are doing it now.

Under real life conditions, as I understand it, it was to keep our party out of touch with Soviet Russia and the Third International. How long they will succeed in this remains to be seen. Clean and honest should be the continual work, agitation and education, and not pay too much attention to the barking of "dog-hounds" of the American capitalist class, as represented by Mr. Nuorteva.

Hoping you will agree with this, I remain
Fraternally yours,
John Morgan.

LENIN AND LONGUET

Lenin publishes an article in the "Kommunistische Internationale" with regard to a letter written to him by Longuet. In this article Lenin criticizes the influence of the considerable movement towards the Left on the part of the working masses, certain leading Socialists would be ready to save their position by the formal acceptance of the dictatorship of the proletariat, being even ready to join the Third International, but, says Lenin, the Dictatorship of the proletariat is a serious matter and cannot be brought about by those who accept it in fact, as well as on paper. It is impossible to accept the Dictatorship of the proletariat and yet at the same time to work side by side with Thomas, Senbat, and Bracke (their English namesakes will readily be supplied by our readers). The Dictatorship of the proletariat implies the continual exposing of the character of the war just ended and the daily emphasis of the possibility of war breaking out again as soon as the people show a tendency to organize the Dictatorship of the proletariat. One must also show up the traitorous behavior of the Social-Democracy during the war and against every worker who is not so essential to carry on a propaganda amongst the masses for the total abolition of capitalism instead of struggling on a purely legal way to better the daily conditions of the workers.

Longuet and his friends, says Lenin, do not understand this, and compares them to the Hungarian Social Democracy, who, accepting the Dictatorship of the proletariat in words, yet sought to keep Bela Kun's Government back where it was, and attempted to put the dictatorship into actual practice. As a result of this, thousands of Hungarian Communists have been martyred.

"Let them 'call'!"

THE LAST WORDS OF A COMMUNIST

The "Mittensch" prints the last words of Eugene Levine (the German Communist executed by the "Socialist" Government of Hoffman in Munich) at his trial. It is well for all workers to remember them:

"If your verdict corresponds to the intentions of the public prosecutor, I beg to protest when it is being carried out. I have known a long time now that we Communists are but 'the dead on leave.' It is a question of whether my ticket of leave shall be once again renewed, or whether I must go and join Karl Liebknecht, but my leave will live on. I shall or later, judges will sit in this court before whom I will be indicted those who have dared to do anything against the Dictatorship of the Proletariat."

"At Last" The Centrists Unite!

Centrist one no doubt from the pens of Damon & Co., Ed.) concerning the overthrow of the capitalist system (note the same mistake that Damon made in his article about the overthrow of the capitalist system, isn't it more than a coincidence? Ed.) It was insisted that the word "corrible" be added. Likewise, at the first mention of "corrible" power, it was demanded that there be added "by the use of armed force." One amendment was piled upon another—"a veritable force panic." (Italics ours, Ed.) "In vain" was it argued that this part of the program continued only preliminary definitions, statements of the goal to be achieved; that the Program, under appropriate sub-divisions, gave full attention to the methods of action; that the form of armed force does not stand by itself but is the inevitable culminative aspect of mass action; that this tactic must be presented in its developmental character—armed uprising as the unavoidable sequence of the advancing class conflict. (Italics ours, Ed.)

The C. L. P. delegates, for the most part, were ready for a test of strength against the C. P. irreconcilables. They were conscious that this minority would have to accept defeat, since the point to be voted was only on what page something should be stated in the program. Others sensed too much danger of misunderstanding behind such a vote, too much anxiety over agreement could easily be reached, Caxton (in which we recognize our old friend Y. F.) moved to recommit this part of the Program, then to adjourn. There were some protests, but the union prevailed. Meanwhile the tension relaxed by the brilliant satirical speech of Sherwood, whose Yankee wit was the perfect antidote for massing those reminders of Oscar Ameringer at the S. P. convention who in every tense situation, was used by the leadership to put the delegates in good humor again, and a such forget what was "fitted" to them. Ed., on an artificially stimulated issue.

How is that for a peaceful "unity session"? Do you see the significance of the whole proceeding in this session? Y. F. characterized those who justly distasteful him and his Centrist colleagues as "freaks of nature." Notice Y. F.'s contemptuous reference to the "freaks of nature" as "such a filthy detail." Note how he speaks of "armed uprising as the unavoidable sequence of the advancing class conflict." Here is a Centrist conception which looks upon the "armed uprising" as something to be avoided, if possible but if not, then to get rid of it as of some terrible nightmare. They dread and fear it, coming at last to the revolution, tardily and unwillingly, as the last movement, with the pacifist moral aspect in their attitude toward it and desiring to get rid of it as soon as possible. To the Centrists "armed uprising" is a necessary evil, and sometimes the Communist Party must prepare itself and class-conscious workers for as the highest stage of the class struggle.

Let our opportunists of the type of Damon, Y. F. & Co., pay the price to the proletarian revolution, mouthe the phrase of "mass action" (which they termed "mass actions" before, isn't natural for advocates of "mass actions" to write with the advocates of "armed uprising" Ed.) and "armed uprising" but in their hearts they are opposed to it—their Centrist activity is for the purpose of delaying this highest stage of the class struggle—their open or surreptitious methods will retard the working class preparation for this culmination.

As for the "unity session" which was thrown into a "veritable force panic," one thing stands out clearly. Many of the delegates sincerely desiring to meet the issue squarely, having learnt from the "majority" criticism of the "minority" position, were determined that their dissident leaders would not fool them on this issue. They wanted the "force panic." It is a natural outcome where the opportunist leaders are determined to put one over on a convention. The delegates, some of whom at least, know their game. Of course, the net result is as far as the program is concerned is as Y. F. states. He knows why he criticizes them; he is opposed to the thing and by the way, he swears the whole program inferentially into the refuse.

The writing of "force" into every part of the program does not make it a Communist program—this is something the United Centrists must have to learn. Another lesson they will have to learn is that even a good program in itself does not make the organization really Communist in character—although the clearness and soundness of the Program does give a clue to the clarity and consciousness of the party which frames it. Even a Communist bunch of opportunist leaders such as Damon, Y. F. & Co.—to lead the organization, expound the principles and tactics, publish its propaganda to the masses would stamp that organization as a group which has been thoroughly exposed as opportunists and Centrists in the split.

But as a matter of fact, the program of the United Centrist Party is a poor mechanically studied document—made to suit every antagonistic faction in the convention—in some parts a poor paraphrasing of fundamentals put together neither sketched within any idea of consistency or ideas of sequence—in some places vague—in some places taken directly from the C. P.—and the last two columns a reprint from the manifesto of the Third International, where their own efforts evidently had proved fruitless. It might do as a primer for beginners in Communist study classes, after the proper revision had been made and it had been touched up in general. But as a Program, it is a good dissertation!

PARLIAMENTARIANISM

On the question of parliamentarianism another discussion ensued which showed how far apart the assembled "united" delegates were on the fundamental questions. They only seemed to agree on the question "unity." All other questions were a "free-for-all-match"—each side giving in a little in order to effect "unity." The anti-parliamentarian Communist program was furthest from their minds.

The anti-parliamentarians criticized the "nominations for legislative offices only"—and the "parliamentarians" themselves differed as to whether to nominate for executive and legislative offices or for legislative offices alone. All three groups differed sharply with each other. A year ago this discussion might have been in place. But since the theses on parliamentarianism which were issued by the Third International have received such wide publicity in Communist circles everywhere it is characteristic of this "unity" convention that even now they are not clear on the subject.

INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM

The third day came the longest and most stubborn debate of the whole convention on the question of Industrial Unionism and the I. W. W. This question there were also three groups—one group who stood for outright endorsement of the I. W. W. (in spite of the recent convention decision of the I. W. W.), another group who were ready to give it a limited endorsement, and a third group who believed neither in a direct endorsement of the

I. W. W. nor in an outright condemnation of the A. F. of L.

Finally, the (former) Chicago District Committee's resolution on this question was adopted which gave an outright endorsement of the I. W. W. But again, in order to maintain harmony and "unity" the convention reconsidered the matter and amended it to please all three factions. The result is that the I. W. W. is neither fish, flesh, fowl nor good nor bad. It has one merit, however, that the "unity convention" is satisfied with it—and that is, it prevented another "split" at the convention.

PARTY NAME ALMOST LEADS TO A SPLIT
Then came the question of a party name—and again fratricidal warfare was waged for almost three days. After thirty votes had been cast for "Communist Party" on a roll call vote our confusion into the "Communist" Party by adopting our name—which meant that the name was adopted—Y. F. called a loud holler, and what Y. F. calls "the final power effective majority criticism" and what we call the deadly roll call of a deadlock and a split, won the day. The question, like all the others, was reconsidered and a new motion, re-introduced to placate all elements, "United" was added and the dove of peace again hovered benignly over the "unity convention."

Thus far, on the reconsidering passed motions the "battling average" of the "unity convention" was 1,000 per cent.

As a bulletin to the wounded feelings and the suspicious of the C. L. P., they were permitted to retain their emblem.

CONSTITUTION-MAKING

Then came the discussion of the constitution. Two questions occupied them—centralization, the other, federations. The question of underground organization was not apparently discussed for nowhere is there a word of mention of this situation. On the question of centralization two main groups stood out. One group apparently headed by Damon & Co. (who now talks of giving the C. E. C. power to elect and control the party officials—some hypocrisy) and the other group composed of the C. L. P. whose conception of Communist Organization, but not advanced from the bourgeois democratic ideology of the S. P. Note their arguments: "Lack of confidence in officials was the central theme of the contrary argument. It threw the entire organization into confusion. We don't blame them—but then why didn't they remain in the S. P., since there is little to choose between the opportunist leaders of the Right and the Communist leaders of the Left? The Right leaders because they are out in open, but the Centrist leaders who lean toward the left, as Lenin said are the most dangerous." (Ed.) The party affairs, it was urged, must be nearer to the control of the rank and file. The central committee had been the breeding place of factional controversies. It was not asking too much to give the district committees veto in the choice of the organizers upon whom their work depended." (Italics ours, Ed.)

Nothing can show the Centrist character of the "unity convention" better than the italicized quoted statement, about "the central committees being the breeding places of factional controversies." As a matter of fact, who has been the C. L. P. echo of Left Wingers who "left" the S. P., not because of a fundamental difference in principles and tactics, but because they were opposed to the S. P. machine and its methods of the Right-Wing, to the crooks and scoundrels among the officialdom.

But perhaps best you think that the other side really believed in revolutionary centralization, we must not be misled by an idea of a pure half and half. On paper the C. E. C. is the highest body between conventions, collects all the dues, publishes all the papers, etc., but actually, each district holds its own conventions to elect its own officers and elect its District Committee. The C. E. C. organization machine extends only as far as the District Organizers, then it stops and meets the machine but the district committees sub-divisions and districts. In other words, there are two machines in their party. A C. E. C. machine and a district machine, each numbering some thirty or more members. The friction between the two machines must lead to paralysis of work, disagreements, appeals, counter-appeals, etc. In case of serious friction, the district committee can do as it pleases even to the extent of bolting the organization. Having abolished language federations, the C. E. C. has no effective counter-measure to the possible machinations of any organized group within the party.

But even this half-and-half measure of centralization was won only after the most stubborn fight. At first the proposition was rejected by a vote of 10-9. It was reconsidered and re-introduced, it took three roll-calls for it finally to pass.

LANGUAGE FEDERATIONS DISPOSED OF

We now come to the question of language federations. Y. F.'s report is interesting in this connection, so we will quote a few paragraphs. The Joint Committee had come to no agreement. In crisis contrast to the history of last summer, when the C. L. P. was the only group who refused to take a rigorous stand against federations. At the convention the C. L. P. delegates took no group stand on this question. Two plans were presented, one for the "United Centrists" (remember Damon's insistence that he was not opposed to federations—that he did not want to abolish them, but only to change their method of paying dues) the other by Dubey and Raphaeloff for the federation members of the C. L. P. The debate was largely between the federalist delegates on both sides. The principal controversy was as to the existence of national executive committees for the language groups, this proposal being decisively voted down.

Anyone who reads the "United Centrist constitution" about language federations will quickly realize that the object behind the abolition of the federations was not to destroy the federations as they claim, but for the purpose of effectively closing the channel of organized expression and control of the vast majority of the foreign comrades who cannot speak English, over the actions of the opportunist leaders of the United Centrist Party of America. This is the object of the "United Centrist constitution" nearly a year had changed its policy, on rather was willing to change its policy. They know by bitter experience, that the "foreign comrades" who cannot speak or understand English must have a centralized body of their own, which can function for them, else they drift away, lose interest in the party or even turn from Communist activity and are swallowed up in other movements.

It will not be very long before Damon & Co. find this out for themselves. In the death, we can safely predict, knowing the character of these men, that the C. E. C. will change the convention decision or make a deal later.

Just as their program is "a scrap of paper" so is their constitution a "scrap of paper." Nor are they afraid of conventions. They can defy conventions and when it gets too hot split away (Continued on page 8.)

Counter-Revolution in Germany

fortunately, only in an objective sense. The proletariat was unarmed, while its representatives manifested neither revolutionary initiative nor political capacity. The fundamental task of the revolution was the call and develop measures for the attainment of the proletariat; no such call was heeded or measures adopted during the first few days of the General Strike—the decisive period, during which the basis had to be laid for all subsequent action.

But elsewhere the revolutionary struggle flared up. Where the workers were armed they initiated a struggle for power, and usurped power in other places they disarmed the troops as a preliminary to the struggle for power. In cities where the Soviet Republics were proclaimed, while in the Ruhr a giant revolutionary struggle loomed threateningly. Among these workers the military coup was a call to action, the opportunity to conquer power. It was the elemental action of the masses breaking loose, in spite of the dangers, in aid of the Party moderates and compromisers. These vital developments indicated that both the Reaction and the Revolution had completely underestimated the German proletariat; the Reaction, its capacity to resist a military dictatorship; the Revolution—its will to engage in the struggle for power.

The menace of Bolshevism, which the Kapp-Luttwitz dictatorship in its first proclamation had projected as a scare, was now a real menace. To continue the struggle between the Government and the proletariat, the Government had to prepare for the revolutionary conquest of power by the proletariat. What was necessary now was agreement with the bourgeoisie, unity against the Revolution. The danger was very real. Hindenburg appealed to Kapp-Luttwitz to withdraw from Berlin, and to the Government for compromise and agreement. The strategy of the Socialist-Revolutionary Government was apparent—in avoiding the decisive military struggle against the coup, the opportunity was provided for agreement and unity against the Revolution. The opportunity was seized at the earliest moment.

It is a fact, in spite of denials, that the Government was negotiating with the Kapp-Luttwitz dictatorship. On Wednesday these negotiations resulted in an agreement. On Monday the Kapp-Luttwitz dictatorship had announced negotiations, and stated its conditions: "Elections to be held two months hence for the Reichstag and the Prussian Landtag; a new President to be elected, the former President to be requested to continue his office until the elections." This declaration was denied by the government and the National Assembly; but the agreement was concluded two days later, practically on the Kapp-Luttwitz dictatorship. On Wednesday the Kapp-Luttwitz dictatorship declared that, having accomplished its mission, the old Government agreed: (1) that elections should be held within two months and that the old President be direct vote of the people, it would withdraw. This was not according to the program of the coup, but it was a partial withdrawal, and moreover, the Kapp-Luttwitz dictatorship withdrew from Berlin with all the honors it was, to the strains of the martial music and assisted in their evacuation by the Government troops; and, in their march, with their march, an armed mass of captured munitions. A proclamation characterizes the agreement in this fashion: "After long negotiations between the representatives of the Government and the representatives of the Kapp-Luttwitz dictatorship, especially between representatives Trimborn, Siedek, and Kapp-Luttwitz, the following compromise has been reached. The representatives of the majority parties will advocate elections to the National Assembly, to take place not later than two months hence. The President, elected by the people; that the National Government will undergo a change in the near future, the carrying on of the Government by the President, to be taken over by vice-Chancellor Schiffer." At 12:15 Thursday morning, Schiffer issued a proclamation in the name of the Government designating Kapp-Luttwitz as commander of the troops and calling for restoration of economic and political activity. A joint proclamation by Schiffer and Hirsch (Social-Democratic) in the name of the National and Prussian Governments declared it was false to accuse the National Army and the Security (Nose) troops of offering no resistance to the coup, and that this delictious hit. It is not commonly known that on the night of Friday-Saturday (March 12-13) the troops stood at their posts ready to defend the Government, but because of the difficult conditions of night fighting, they were, before the advance of the rebels, recalled to barracks.

Simultaneously with the conclusion of the compromise, the Government and the bourgeois parties issued the slogan: "Back to work." The analysis of the economic activity united with the menace of Bolshevism to support the compromise. But the proletariat of Berlin rejected the call to end the strike, the trades unions and the Social-Democratic Party being completely against the strike to proceed against the compromise.

The General Strike was now, in its impulse and in the mood of the masses, a strike against the Government. But, in the conscious direction imparted to it by the trades union bureaucracy and S. P. L., the strike was against the compromise of the Government—purposely or stupidly evading the problem, in that the compromise was not a formal agreement but in the prevailing situation itself, the Government might repudiate the formal agreement but would inevitably be compelled to compromise, as actually did happen. The compromise agreed upon by the Government and the military coup, the masses persisting in the General Strike, now in fact, the strike against the Government—these developments emphasized the inherent character of the crisis, as developing the conditions and providing the opportunity for the definite Communist struggle for power.

It was clear to all that the continuation of the General Strike was latent with the threat of proletarian revolution. On Thursday and Friday the citizens of Berlin acted as in mortal terror. The Government, the bourgeoisie, the trades unions, were on all tongues and the basis of discussion in all rooms. At night, stores and hotels were crowded with troops armed with machine guns and rifles. The Government troops now occupied the entrenchments erected by the Kapp-Luttwitz troops and new entrenchments were erected. Rules were frequent, the Government troops using rifles and machine guns at the least pretext; in three days more persons were shot by the Government troops than in the five days of the Kapp-Luttwitz dictatorship. In the proletariat a new energy manifested itself, a desire to use all means for the overthrow of the Government. But the General Strike did not move to Revolution, nor was it the masses who were not ready, but the representatives of the masses.

Never were the limitations of the General Strike more apparent than in Berlin. The strike was complete for eight days not a factory nor a car was in motion. But in spite of all this, the strike broke and dispersed after unfulfilled promises of concessions by the Government.

JEWISH FEDERATION

The Jewish Federation Convention held recently split at the last moment, four delegates going to the "minority" and thirteen delegates remaining with the Communist Party. Raphael and Cornell also went with the "minority" after their maneuvering to win the convention over to the "minority," and finally for "neutrality," had failed diametrically. Raphael turned out to be a worthy companion to Damon, Isaac, Langley & Co. since his defection from the ranks of the "majority."

The Jewish Federation elected a C. E. C., and the process of re-organization is taking place rapidly. More than half of the membership with them and the others are slowly turning back. The Brooklyn, the largest branch in Chicago, a branch in Brooklyn, the largest in Philadelphia, already.

POLISH FEDERATION

The C. E. C. of the Polish Federation has expelled Triney, its former Secretary, who went with the "minority," and is in the process of getting back the property of the Federation in his hands. Many of the Polish branches are with the C. E. C. of the Party, and, after their own convention, the whole Federation with very few exceptions will probably be back in the Party.

District No. 1. The leaflets will be printed and distributed. Our comrades suggest that the leaflets should be printed on one side only, to they can be posted on walls, poles, etc. Also text should not be very long.

I hear, that "our" joint convention has decided to demand "unity" with the "Big Bluff of Bolshevism" (E. B. B.) gang, as if they had not enough of bluff already. I don't think we should fall for it. Perhaps, they have realized that they themselves haven't enough of "bluff."

Something should be done in the Fraña case. Mr. Nuorteva is getting too bold. I think we should expose that gentleman a little, because he is not much known outside of Massachusetts.

District No. 1 delegates claimed they represented 400 members in the "unity" convention. Our Americanized Lettish branch is still undecided and might go with them. Their members say that the "unity" program and constitution is very very "r-revolutionary." Our own comrades say "no" to the "unity" convention. Our District and Sub-District Committees will decide whether we should keep a paid sub-district organizer or not.

Yours for E. B. B.

District Organizer, No. 1.

District No. 2. The four sub-districts in this district are now fairly well-organized. New York City, approximately 900 members, New Jersey, 569 members, Connecticut, 287 members, and Upper New York State, about 300 members. Queens section, after having bolted the "minority," has returned to the C. E. C. Leaflets on Transport Workers, and New Offensive Against Soviet Russia, printed and in the hands of sub-districts. The "minority" in this district are silent on the results of their "unity" convention, evidently they are not bragging about the results, and for good reason too, as a glance at their new organ will show.

Work is proceeding well and things are normal in general.

District No. 3. Last week I was in Wilkes Barre sub-district. Things there are alright and our work is proceeding very well. The Polish Comrades repudiated their former actions, voted that they agree with us on principles and this week they will decide whether they will participate in our convention.

Garish came to his Jewish comrades to make a report of the "unity" convention; he started to read the program and constitution but his members didn't want to go on principles and as they say they wanted only to hear some changes, as they are not a new party. And the meeting broke up. There is complete disorganization, and they are disgusted with the actions of the "minority." It is too late to get now, but do not worry, they will come to us.

Baltimore Sub-district is O. K. Lithuanians, representing 238 members, held a S. D. Convention and unanimously decided to stand with the "majority." Contributed $50.00 with greetings to the Party.

District No. 4 (Pittsburgh and Cleveland), Erie, small but active membership—Polish, Lith., Jewish, Lettish and Russian branches—committee meets regularly—functions excellently. German branch neutral, contributes to our Party and distributes our literature. Lithuanian, Ukrainian and Russian—Buffalo—Russian, Ukrainian, German, Polish and English branches. Committee meets regularly—finances absorbed by local defense—membership sound and solidly with English (36) and German (15) are most active and loyal.

Wheeling, W. Va. district consists of small towns along Ohio River. Membership small and inactive. Pittsburgh—Lithuanian, So. Slavic, Ukrainian branches only—has large and active membership in 30 towns—mostly new and not broken in to party work. But loyal and active—finances good. Will become very powerful district as members are young and enthusiastic.

Akron committee against us through Centrist activities of former local secretary—consists of German, Polish, Lithuanian, Ukrainian and Russian branches—Lithuanian branch entirely lost—district will have to be re-organized after convention. No finances as Secretary has told members that funds will be stolen.

Cleveland, committee recently organized and meets most regularly, membership large and inactive—finances go entirely through Federations sources. Russian branch (12 members) just pay dues. Lithuanian branch (300 members) very inactive. etts best branch and active. Youngstown, Warren, Toledo, no connections, one Ukrainian, Russian and Lithuanian branches respectively with us and will be represented in district by delegate. This report supplements last report as to membership, does not supercede.

RESOLUTION OF BRANCH No. 1 (PHILADELPHIA) OF THE LITHUANIAN FEDERATION

We, group of delegates of Branch 1, Lithuanian Communist Federation, at a meeting held May 7, 1920, having considered reports of both sides of the C. E. C. Communist Party, arrived at the following conclusion, and adopted a resolution to that effect:

1. Whereas, splitting the Party, especially at the present moment, while the Party is being torn to pieces by the most violent rage of reaction and while it is in process of reorganizing itself from the open existence to an underground basis, is treason to proletarian interests and a violation of the Party discipline;

2. Whereas the "minority," headed by Damon, and in the role of the Party disrupters and left the Central Executive Committee;

3. And, whereas, the fundamental reason for the "minority's" withdrawal from the C. E. C. is a disagreement in the matter of principles and tactics, and not technical questions;

Therefore, Branch No. 1 of the Lithuanian Communist Federation has come to a decision, that:

1. We resolutely protest against the minority withdrawal from the C. E. C. Communist Party, and against splitting the Party;

2. We demand that the "minority" turn the Party funds over to the majority of the C. E. C.;

3. We, the whole majority of the Party, on the question of principles, which is in harmony with the proposition of the Third Communist International and the program of the American Communist Party;

4. Together with the majority we stand for: a) The Soviet System, b) Dictatorship of the Proletariat, and a revolutionary interpretation of Mass Action.

We endorse the position taken by the Exec. Committee of the Lith. Fed. on this question, and we condemn the minority with Damon as their head, for their treacherous work of splitting the Party.

Group Delegates of Branch No. 1, Lithuanian Commun. Fed., Phila., Pa.

A New Attack Upon The Communist Party.

It, by far not all "other members of Fraña's group" have been arrested, and if this is to be sufficient basis for charges of connection with the D. of the "minority" or "other members" are "suspicious" individuals. Perhaps this is the implication that Nuorteva wished to be drawn from his statement.

As to Fraña's leaving in company with Nosovitzky (No. 6), the arrangements for this were made entirely privately of both, and not at all between themselves, as Nuorteva implies.

In regard to No. 7, there has been a "trial" of D. Nosovitzky's stenographic report of which shows that there were other possibilities of that letter coming into the hands of the D. of J. in their Bulletin the whole proceedings of the Conference, and Palmer could get all his information from there without any difficulty.

All the new charges as to "other members" would not stand investigation. To come out with them without any authoritative investigation—to come out with them without any authoritative investigation—to come out with them without any authoritative investigation—HAS BEEN PROVEN FALSE. These are facts which must reflect most seriously upon the maker himself, and cast any shadows either on the persons or the Party attacked.

Yours for Communism.

"At Last" The Centrists Unite.

before the next convention, organize their own convention and thus rehabilitate themselves as "leaders" (save the mark!). They have done it before and they can do it again.

THE ELECTION FARCE

Now we come to the piece-de-resistance of the "unity" convention—the elections. We shall quote: "Late in the afternoon of the fourth day of the joint sessions (joint sessions?) and we thought all the time it was a 'unity' convention"—[Isn't it mean of Y. F. to so cruelly shatter our illusions and perhaps the illusions of the U. C. P. Ed.] It was decided to proceed with elections of party officials. There had been many hours of caucusing on each side as to elections. Representatives of the sentiment of the convention expressed by a majority vote against further caucuses (what is a majority vote in a convention to Damon & Co. and the C. L. P. Menshevik leaders? Ed.) neither side was willing to risk a surrender of its group strength. (Strange situations for people who have been shouting "unity" for over a year and are about to accomplish it "at last" Ed.)

Now how even both groups in the "unity" convention" dusted each other after the adoption of an apparently satisfactory program to all concerned. No better proof of the insincerity and hypocrisy of the "unity" convention than its proceedings can be given than the suspicion, distrust, jockeying, bargaining, trading, dickering that went on during the election of officials. The mask of "unity" was thrown off "at last." Both groups stood, ready to battle for the control of the new organization. "Control" or "split" he came the new slogan of both sides. And we are not alone in this. Let Y. F. tell you all about it. There was there and witnessed it: "Then came ten nominations for the nine places on the C. E. C. Damon, Scott, Reinhart, Delton, Zemlin (C. L. P.); Meyer, Klein, Flynn, Brown, Dawson (C. L. P.). These were the caucus nominations. Obviously the C. L. P. caucus had determined to avail itself of the dissensions in the C. P. ranks and to elect a majority of the committee. (Won't somebody be shouting "packed" convention soon? Ed.)

"At the night session was announced the result of the balloting: Damon, Scott, Klein, Flynn, 22; Brown, 22; Dawson, 22; Meyer 30; Reinhart 22; Delton, Zemlin tied at 24. (Damon & Co. evidently got a bad hick and they knew it too. Watch them swing into action when the question of "control" is involved. There he fights for control. But on principles, that's another story. Ed.)

"Damon, Scott and Reinhart quickly offered resignations. A bitter discussion was precipitated. Both sides had planned for "control" and the C. L. P. had been a boomerang; for how it was urged, could the C. P. delegates report back to their members that they had been outwitted in strategy in order to give the minority control of the united party? Even though the fault was that of the C. P. delegates themselves, how could that make the outside situation? (Here Y. F. unwittingly gives a sidelight on the situation which would make pleasant reading about a Democratic or Republican Convention but coming from a so-called Communist Convention represents the very lowest order of political consciousness. Do you see what worried the "minority" C. P. delegates—not the formulation of a Communist Program and the laying of the basis for their activities for the coming year—or even the superficial achievement of "unity" which they did manage to accomplish for the time—but what their members will think if the C. L. P. gets control of the party? Ed.)

After some bitter retorts from the C. L. P. a recess was held for half an hour.

"Then began the tug of war which went into the middle of the night, only to be resumed the next day. The two groups, apparently completely welded, now standing apart as C. P. and C. L. P. The convention vanished; in its place were two caucuses, with committees for interchange of offers and counter-proposals.

"The strained item in the C. P. camp had been an attack upon Caxton, based on the "majority" C. P. criticism. (So, our work was bearing fruit "at last" Ed.) In the C. P. caucus, after long discussion, Caxton had been nominated for the C. E. C. 18 to 5. (Was Reinhart, who used to denounce Y. F. when he appeared at meetings one of the 9?) Later Caxton withdrew his name. Now it was insisted that his name be re-introduced, making Zemlin first alternate. Caxton was to substitute Caxton for Brown as International Secretary. (The International Secretaryship, the highest office in the party is something to be traded and bargained for not on the basis of the man most fit for it but on a purely bourgeois basis of political trading. Ed.)

"The last morning found the situation deadlocked. To open the convention again meant to give the C. P. the advantage of the renewed caucus pressure in favor of solidarity for C. P. control, all questions of personality aside. The issue of control having been precipitated by the turn of the election, the C. P. delegates were in no mood to give up their demand for a majority of the C. E. C.

"The C. P. delegates made only demand, to reopen the convention, it was for the other side to make the next move.

"How is one to visualize one group of delegates in heated argument, while the other group is engaged in the singing of revolutionary songs, most something in the way of special dimensions? The singing group marches halfway toward the argument—international—and reluctantly back to its own meeting place.

"There is a committee conference. Before the new march back the lines are formed for a new march. This time to go all the way. Agreement is reported: a C. E. C. of ten members, the now to be elected, five C. P. members, the only report to the anxious C. L. P. delegates, the two groups merge into one another, all singing the International. There is the grasping of hands, the embracing of comrades, the singing of songs, there is too much feeling for speech. "Unity is achieved."

"At last!" as Damon would say, the torture and suspense is over "unity is achieved!" The Centrists have united into the United Centrist Party of America.

Need anything more be added to the foregoing? Surely, every reader has formed a vivid picture in his mind of the "unity" convention which saw the birth to U. C. P. of the "Bolsheviks" of the type of Damon, Y. F. & Co. Born and mothered by the C. L. P.—with some re-education from the "minority" of the International in the role of godfather (the latter himself responsible for a great deal of the discrediting of the "unity" convention). This new United Centrist Party is doomed to an ignoble career in the Communist movement in this country.
